Job Fair 2012, the missing link: PM

By BRADFORD THEONOMI

PRIME Minister Gordon Darcy Lilo says the hosting of the first ever inaugural Job Fair 2012 is a missing link.

He said this while referring to the fact that it contributes to the many of our challenges in the development era of our public private partnership syndrome.

The Job Fair 2012 is a first ever inaugural event hosted for business houses and private companies to showcase their capabilities and opportunities for school dropouts and those seeking for job opportunities.

The two days event continues today at the Multi-Purpose Hall with the theme: Job Fair 2012 - 'Interfacing into a new reality.'

"This event amongst others is an opportune moment for the employers to re-affirm the levels of skills in demand by their institutions on one hand and for the job seekers and employees to match their acquired skills and qualifications to the demands of the employers on the other.

"It is pivotal for us as partners to bridge the gaps between the employers and the employees on the issue of employability.

"In the same way it is also critical for us to focus on creating an ethical and employable category of young graduates and potential job seekers," said Lilo.

He said his hope that this occasion will give rise to the creation of a well-structured system to allow job seekers to use it as a one stop shop.

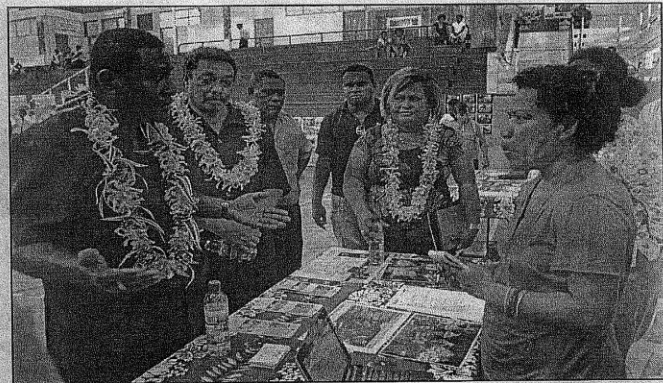

Furthermore it is imperative for us as responsible partners to create a new awareness of current workforce demands in our priority sectors and sources for growth."

Lilo acknowledged the Solomon Islands Chambers of Commerce and Industry (SICCI) in its survey highlighted the need for informed decision making when offering scholarships and facilitating training opportunities.

Thirteen private companies including the Royal Solomon Islands Police Force (RSIPF) are some of the key stakeholders in business that took part in this first ever inaugural event.

It is organized in partnership by the Solomon Islands Women in Business Association (SIWBA) together with the Solomon Islands Chambers of Commerce with co-funding from AusAid.

PM hails women for Job Fair event

By BRADFORD THEONOMI

PRIME Minister Gordon Darcy Lilo has applauded the Solomon Islands Women in Business Association for organising the first ever inaugural Job Fair 2012 event.

"Your active participation and willingness to anchor this initiative through your association speaks volumes of your preparedness and courage to be a beacon in a male dominated environment," Mr Lilo told the women yesterday.

"You have proven that collectively we can make a difference and you have proven that you are the vital link that will bind our efforts and endeavours for growth in this country.

"So I congratulate you and urge you to stand tall among your peers."

The prime minister said he believed this event has paved a path for stable growth and harmony amongst our communities.

"Therefore I encourage all of us, particularly the initiators and facilitators of this initiative to nurture and ensure that this is not only perceived as an annual event but rather as a milestone as we strive for excellence in our respective careers, workplaces, environment and institutions.

"As we look into the future may we be mindful of our need to support and assist each other from our respective perspectives and in this case the strengthening of the public private partnership.

"I also urge you to be mindful of the steps for advancement of our development aspirations and a better future for our generations.

"Thus, as we begin this journey let us stay on course and deliver what is expected of us as responsible individuals and credible organisations," Mr Lilo said.

The association's president Julie Haro said they have a mission to promote and empower women at all levels and they would like to see women move into another level.

"We need a place where we can call home."
